WILL BEGIN WORK ON SEWER

Dean McCaustland Will Start Mapping and Estimates Next Week.
Preliminary work on the extensions to Columbia's sewer system and disposal plant probably will begin next week, according to E. J. McCaustland, dean of the School of Engineering, who is to direct the construction. "Just now," said Dean McCaustland, "we will make a map of the sewer system of the town with such other estimates as will enable us to begin actual work early in the spring."

MEAT PRICES ARE DECREASING HERE

High Class Meat and Best Cuts Can Be Bought at Pre-War Prices.

We are still helping the people of Columbia and vicinity by fighting the high cost of living. We are selling high grade meats 25 per cent cheaper than any other meat market in Missouri. We know that we are. This morning a traveling man for a packing house told us we are and we want you to know it.

Our price on the best cuts of meat are now practically the same as pre-war prices. You are not justified in grumbling about the high cost of living if you go elsewhere and pay 25 per cent more for your meat.

Tomorrow we will have a display of fresh meats of high quality and we want every housewife and every man who buys meat to come and see it and get our prices and compare them with the prices you pay for meat in other markets. Why pay more when you can get the best for less? These prices are not temporary and are not made as leaders but they will continue at our market.

A visit to our market to see the meat display is well worth your time.

JAPANESE STUDENT IN AMERICAN ARMY

Many Nationalities in Hawaiian Infantry, Says U. Watada, Now at M. U.

VARIETY IN RELIGION

All Learned Simple English During Seven Months' Classes.

Umematsu Watada, an American citizen of Japanese parentage, served in Company K, First Regiment of Hawaiian Infantry. Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiians, Koreans, Filipinos, Spaniards, Englishmen, Frenchmen, Italians, Swedes and Americans rubbed shoulders in the Hawaiian forces, and their religious differences were as numerous as their bloods.

A Chinese was captain of Mr. Watada's company. One of his first lieutenants was an American, the other a Chinese. His second lieutenant was a Japanese and his first sergeant a Chinese.

Japanese, Hawaiians and Filipinos made up the most of the six thousand troops raised in Hawaii. No fighting broke out between the different groups. Any rivalry that may have existed was exercised in striving to make the best appearance on drill.

Both regiments were turned into a school. Most of the soldiers understood no English. The men were divided into classes, and educated men knowing their language were chosen from the service for teachers. During the seven months that instruction lasted, all the men were able to learn to write, speak and read simple English. Mr. Watada, who has studied two years in the College of Hawaii at Honolulu, was chosen as one of the teachers. The men went to classes all day, and twice a week at night also, if they were slow in learning. The Y. M. C. A. supervised the instruction.

Paul Steele, a graduate of the School of Education in the University of Missouri, had charge of all the army schools. Other Missourians in Y. M. C. A. work were Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Killam and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Loomis.

The Japanese were especially eager to learn English and take out naturalization papers. Most of them were laborers working for thirty dollars a month, but now as American citizens they are eligible to work for the government at jobs paying $3 and $4 a day.

Mr. Watada gathered data on the pay and living expenses of laborers on the sugar plantations to aid Clinton S. Childs, a graduate of the University, who was hired by the sugar planters to superintend the laborers' welfare. Average wages, Mr. Watada found, run about $20 a month. To this a bonus of $10 a month is added, and, if the laborer stays at his job the whole year, he draws 40 per cent of both his pay and monthly bonus in addition. It costs a single man $18 or $20 a month to live, and a married couple without children $30 or $35. These figures include food, shelter, clothing and all other expenses.

Nearly all the Hawaiian, Japanese and Filipinos still hold to their native religions. Mr. Watada himself was a Buddhist till the age of twelve. He was then converted to the Congregational Church, but his parents remain true to their old religion, although they did not oppose their ton in his change of belief.

Mr. Watada is studying soils at the College of Agriculture to prepare himself for work with sugar-growing in Hawaii. He expects to stay at the University till he is graduated.

NEW WINTER COATS

IN

SOFT, LUXURIOUS FABRICS

Remember when winter coats were made of heavy, bulky, and thick materials that seemed necessary to keep out the cold?

How different now! This will be a winter of soft, luxurious fabrics that will keep you just as snugly warm. Printzess, Woolltex, and Bischof have developed these new materials into coats of enduring loveliness and charm.

Our new coat display embraces fine, stylish materials like Silvertip Bolivia, Peachbloom, Chameleon Cord, Duvet de Laine, Velangora. Many are fur or plush trimmed, with linings of fine, heavy silk.

The new fabrics are reasonable—perhaps even more moderate than you expect. The coats are priced
